Average—ONE NEWSPAPER A DAY

IT is a heavy load getting out four complete newspapers in a four-day work week and the heaviest part falls on the "Line". The "Line" is the battery of Mergenthaler Linotypes operated by 10 skilled Negro operators who represent the cream of the crop of linotype operators turned out by Hampton, Tuskegee, Prairie View and other Negro trade schools.

These men do a tremendous job and do it with skill and speed not surpassed in any other newspaper plant regardless of color.

In the four-day work week (Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday) a 24-page, a 14-page, a 16-page and 28-page paper are set complete in every detail.

We Are Accused of Inciting to Riot and Being Traitors

USUALLY careful and usually fair, Editor Virginius Dabney of the Richmond, Va., Times Dispatch, succumbed on April 26 to the seemingly irresistible urge of most white southerners to contrast the "good" conduct of "their" Negroes with the "militant" conduct of some Negroes far away, especially those in New York.

The editorial, entitled "The Negroes and the War," starts out by praising Richmond Negroes for buying War bonds and stamps and holding a parade and mass meeting to stimulate such sales, and winds up by lambasting the Pittsburgh Courier, THE CRISIS, and the N.A.A.C.P. This magazine and the N.A.A.C.P. are accused of the serious offense of inciting to riot, in the following language:

Race riots are occurring in various cities, mostly Southern, in the vicinity of army camps, almost always between Negro soldiers and white policemen. The prevailing assumption is that these bloody encounters are due primarily to the campaign being carried on by such publications as THE CRISIS and such agencies as the NAACP. The latter organization has been responsible for many important and justifiable advances on the part of Negroes, but the manner in which it has stirred Negro citizens, and particularly Negro soldiers, to demand the complete wiping out of all racial differentiation overnight is one of the chief reasons why there is such interracial tension among us, and why some Negroes are indifferent to America's war effort.

This utterly ridiculous charge was well answered by readers of the Times Dispatch in the letter column of the paper. It must have come as something of a surprise to Editor Dabney that the critics of his editorial were not residents of New York or Pittsburgh or Chicago, but of Virginia. The replies were so pointed, so logically grounded, and exposed so completely the reasoning in the April 26 editorial that the editor felt it necessary to write a second editorial May 2, leading off with: "The widespread misinterpretation by leading Virginia Negroes of our editorial . . . makes necessary this amplification of what we said on that occasion." Answers by Times Dispatch readers form an editorial in themselves, and some excerpts follow:

You infer that the NAACP is responsible for race riots involving soldiers. This is a rank injustice to that organization and deserves an apology. How low is any man, white or black, supposed to place his self respect? . . . One can readily imagine situations which will demand that a man protect himself and he will never have heard of the NAACP. . . . I refute the charge that the Negro's campaign is sabotaging national efforts.—Arthur Russell.

Can any of us ask another to defend that which he is denied?—W. Lester Banks.

Indictments against the NAACP, THE CRISIS and Negro newspapers were both unwarranted and unjust. . . . Not at any time has this great organization advocated violence or riots as a solution to these problems. . . . Sociology teaches us that riots and revolutions come as the result of unrest and oppression.—William F. Richardson.

To entertain the idea, not to say to state it, that the NAACP or any other organization could stir up this extreme violence if there were no social injustice, is, in our opinion, a result of less than careful objective analysis. Disorders . . . are the result of repression and not of propaganda.—Joseph Pruden and Daniel Boddie.

We would like to know where the assumption prevails that the "bloody encounters" in the camps are "due primarily to the campaign being carried on by THE CRISIS and the NAACP." This presumption places the result in the place of the cause.—Business and Professional Women's club of the Richmond YWCA.

Thousands of unlettered Negroes who have never heard of the NAACP are indifferent to the war effort . . . for the simple reason that they have lost faith in the justice of White America. . . . One cannot expect them to make philosophic comparisons between the place of the Negro under Axis domination and in "democratic" America. All they know is that they are suffering now.—A. Otis Wells.

Your insinuation that the continued efforts of the NAACP and other organizations committed to gaining equal rights for all persons in this country regardless of creed or color "are bound to result in immeasurable strife, if not additional bloodshed" is not warranted. . . . Can this country expect the Negro to give his wholehearted support in the war for democracy abroad while his own government denies it to him here?—Martin A. Martin.

Two other letters were printed up to May 17. One was from a white man saying the Negro "has his place in this world as the Almighty intended it" and that equality was "not intended at the beginning." The other letter, printed May 17, was from Dean William Pickens, now on leave from the NAACP staff helping the Treasury department in the War bonds sales. Dean Pickens said (a) the original Times Dispatch editorial was "full of good will for the Negro race in America;" (b) Negroes are loyal as a group, "but with some few traitors and some very foolish persons in their midst."

This letter from Dean Pickens so delighted Editor Dabney that he felt moved to write a third editorial May 17, saying, "We are glad to publish at the head of today's Voice of the People, a letter from Dr. William Pickens, one of the most distinguished of American Negroes."

With the Pickens letter as an excuse, the Times Dispatch then agrees with the Dean's assertion that there are a few traitors among Negroes, saying, "This newspaper has never stated that more than a small minority of Negroes were disloyal or engaged in deliberately stirring up discord."

Since the only groups mentioned by name on April 26 by Editor Dabney as stirring up discord were THE CRISIS and the NAACP, it is a fair deduction that he meant on April 26 to call us traitors, but was not emboldened to do so until May 17 when he had in hand a letter from Dean Pickens which he interprets as sufficient support for charging disloyalty, which, of course, is synonymous with traitorous action.

Editor Dabney knows we are not traitors. He knows the NAACP and THE CRISIS did not incite any riots at or near Army camps in southern states, or anywhere else at any time. He knows we are not responsible for interracial tensions. He knows we have not belittled America's war effort. He knows the treatment of Negro soldiers at Fort Bragg by white southern military police brought on the riot of August 6, 1941. He knows that white highway police ordered United States Army officers last August at Gurdon, Ark., to "get these niggers off the highway," referring to men of the 94th Engineers division, and that they slapped a white lieutenant who said a word for his men.

Editor Dabney knows that twelve Negro soldiers were shot last January in Alexandria, La., by white city and state policemen who took over an argument between white military policemen and Negro soldiers. Editor Dabney ought to know that in his own state, at Petersburg, Negro soldiers from Camp Lee are not permitted to walk down certain streets, or be seen in certain neighborhoods. Whole zones are, in the Hitler language, "verboten"—not to soldiers, but to Negro soldiers.

These are the conditions, which can be multiplied again and again, which incite to riot, cause bloodshed and create continuing interracial tension. It is sheer nonsense to say that the men involved reacted because they had been "stirred up" by THE CRISIS and the NAACP. This type of thinking will get no results, not only on the complex domestic race problem, but on the job of winning the war and making a just peace on the basis of the Four Freedoms.

A CERTIFICATION OF MERIT

(Excerpt from Best's 1941 Life Insurance Reports)

"The Company has long been managed in the interests of its policyholders, and the results achieved are above the average for the business.
In our opinion, it has considerable margin for contingencies. Upon the foregoing analysis of its present position (Statement for Dec. 31, 1940), we recommend this Company."

The Atlanta Life is grateful for the full measure of support from its policyholders and friends which has made possible the opportunity for great public service. We therefore pledge our manpower and resources to the creation of better life and living for all whom we may touch. We will continue to operate on the tried and proven basis of safety, security, and dependability.

In meeting
the supreme test of our business —

"Prompt payment in full" — The Atlanta Life has earned an enviable reputation. During the year 1941 more than a million dollars was paid to policyholders or their beneficiaries. This raised the total since 1905 to more than 20 million.

The Company was among the first to liberalize the standard war clause in its policies, so that now most classes of policyholders are guaranteed full coverage for all war casualties that occur within the continental borders of the U. S. A. This excellent provision applies to both soldiers and civilians, making possible greatly enlarged measures of security.
No increase in premium has been made for any group of policyholders.

Life Insurance For and By Negroes of the United States

By M. S. Stuart

THIS discussion is introduced by presenting below an excerpt containing the principal features of a policy insuring the lives of two Negro slaves in favor of their master in 1852. A photographic copy of the original is in the possession of the writer.

In addition to any historical value which may attach to this unusual document, there are two points of interest to be noted in relation to the degree of appreciation in which life insurance is held by the current generation of Negroes. First, the monetary value of colored women as appraised by the white master upon a cold, materialistic basis, compared to the average insurance now carried upon the lives of both men and women in Negro companies, which is $170 per capita. Second, the added protection to life and health required by the terms of the policies for the slaves upon whose lives the insurance was fortunately placed. (Attached to the policy was a Certificate of Sale of "one Negro Woman, Harriet," sold by David Long to Thomas C. Gower for $775.)

Excerpts from the policy follow:

THIS POLICY OF INSURANCE WITNESSETH:

No. 802

THAT THE SOUTHERN MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY, in consideration of draft of hand, of even date herewith, given to said Company by Thomas C. Gower for the sum of TWENTY SEVEN and 50/100 Dollars, two thirds of which has been paid in Cash and endorsed thereon.

DO INSURE THE LIVES OF THE WITHIN NAMED SLAVE OR SLAVES, belonging to Thomas C. Gower of Greenville in the State of SOUTH CAROLINA in the amount set opposite his, her or their names, as below, viz:

	Name	Age	Amount
(Sold)	Louisa	14	$400
	Harriet	32	500

Amounting to the total sum of NINE HUNDRED.....Dollars, for the term of One year from the date of this Policy.

AND THE SAID COMPANY DO HEREBY PROMISE TO PAY TO THE SAID.....THOMAS C. GOWER..... within sixty days after due proof of the death of the above named Slaves, (if the death shall occur within the time for which this policy shall be effected) the amount insured in this policy, and set opposite the name or names of the deceased:

PROVIDED ALWAYS, (and it is hereby declared to be the true intent and meaning of this Policy) that if the application signed by the said.....THOMAS C. GOWER.....and dated JULY 7TH 1852 shall be in any respect fraudulent or untrue; or if the said slave, or slaves, or any of them shall die by his, her or their own hands.....or by the mal-treatment or neglect of their owner or any person to whom he, she or they may be entrusted; or if in case of sickness they shall fail to receive all due and proper care, promptly and without delay, the said Company shall not be liable to pay the sum insured and set opposite their names.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the said Company have, by their President and Secretary and by C. J. Elford, Agent at GREENVILLE, S. C., signed this policy at 12 O'Clock (at noon) this the 7th day of July, One Thousand Eight Hundred and fifty-two.

But it should not be assumed that Negroes in slavery were not themselves interested in making some provisions for relief from the misfortunes of disability and death.

The benefits of organized relief were early appreciated by the slaves. The Free African Society, a benevolent association, was organized in Philadelphia in 1787; and following this, several other similar organizations sprang up in the "free states." In the slave states, also, burial and benevolent societies were organized, even though their existence had to be kept secret, because the slaves were not permitted to hold meetings. Despite this difficulty, however, they contrived a scheme by which the members were known by numbers; and following the funeral of a deceased member the "dues" were faithfully left at a designated place. Their mites thus assembled formed "a death benefit" to be turned over to the bereaved relatives.

Most of the organizations of this type, crude though they were, operated successfully both before and after the Civil War. In that period of distress among the freed slaves immediately following the Emancipation they performed noble services in administering to the sick and needy. Members unable to make the required contributions in money made up for it by donating their labor to do the laundrying, nursing and cooking for the members disabled.

The Secret Society Period

It was not long after the Emancipation before the benevolent societies were succeeded by or gave way to the secret or fraternal benefit societies which became popular and grew rapidly. They soon were to be found in nearly all communities of large Negro population. They had several features of strong appeal to the colored people who had not yet advanced sufficiently in education and matters of finance to analyze the soundness of their methods of operation, nor to recognize the impracticabilities of their principles. With their glittering regalia and brilliant parades, they were imitations, though impotent ones, of the state militia in the several states, from which Negroes had been gradually excluded. They offered lucrative joining and initiation fees to deputies to organize lodges. For the leaders there was fat revenue from the sale of charters, regalia, buttons, pins, rituals, various other literature, paraphernalia and degrees.

They held out the inducement, largely fictional, of recognition, equality and protection given white members of societies by the same names. With the organization of state grand and national or supreme lodges, and the attachment of insurance departments, many lucrative offices were created and there ensued some rather vicious political practices and financial scandals. This fraternal regime might be roughly confined to the period between 1870 and 1920. It was the half century of their greatest popularity and prosperity. It was in this period and in the operation of this type of organizations that some of the race's greatest economic mistakes were made, and large amounts of money lost and general confidence in the business ability of the leaders destroyed.

Although stressing the insurance benefits as their major features, the most basic principles of the insurance business were flagrantly flouted. They attempted to operate on grossly inadequate rates in most of the orders. By 1915 many of the fraternal benefit societies were beginning to have financial difficulties, which soon caused liquidations. Some few, however, among them notably the Supreme Camp of The American Woodmen, of Denver, Colorado, early adopted proper rates and principles and have con-

The Beginning of Life Insurance

Life insurance in this country is not a very old business even among white people. Nor has it been a very successful business in their hands. Less than 25 of the more than 400 white organizations now operating were organized prior to 1865. Less than one-third of them were organized prior to 1900. Of about 883 companies organized between 1854 and 1929, there were 478 white and 5 Negro companies to close their doors through failure, merger, reinsurance, liquidation or retirement.

Negroes began forming life insurance organizations in the years closely preceding or following the beginning of the century. Some benevolent associations were converted into mutual life companies, some into stock life companies. Then others capitalized and organized companies definitely financial and corporate in nature from the beginning.

In these various ways about fifty-three concerns, which could reasonably be classed as life insurance companies, were begun. About fifteen of these have ceased doing business under the names by which they were first known. Nine of these were either reinsured or merged with other companies of the race.

One so-called bi-racial company was organized about twenty-five years ago. It did not last long as such; and since then there has been only one successful reinsurance or absorption of a Negro company by a white company or by white interests. That was effected only about two years ago.

National Negro Insurance Association

In 1921 the National Negro Insurance Association was organized. But not for several years afterwards was the organization able to get anything like uniform and complete reports from all the Negro companies, nor even from all of those holding membership in the Association. Figures, therefore, representing the early years of progress may not be entirely accurate.

Imposing arrays of figures, portraying the accomplishments of race companies, have frequently been published. It is to be doubted whether or not the public's interest is ever great in, or its memory long on, a parade of large, cold figures. In fact, there are sometimes indications that a large part of the otherwise intelligent policyholding public is somewhat dense when it comes to the nature and method of operations of life insurance companies. "Which is the largest Negro Company?" That question is often asked. The answer may depend upon the viewpoint and interest of the person questioned. It might be contended that the company with the greatest amount of business in force is the largest. With equal force it might be argued that the one with the greatest premium income is the largest. Or with plausible logic it might be said that the one with the greatest amount of assets is the largest. Not excelling in all three phases, there yet might be doubt. Nor must the largest necessarily be the strongest and soundest.

Of all the phases of a life insurance company, the interest of the policyholder should be in the reserves to a greater extent than other features. If a company is properly setting aside and wisely investing the legally required proportion of the premiums each year, there is not much else for the policyholder to fear. But actually not many policyholders in Negro companies understand much about reserve requirements.

All the figures herein quoted are from the reports of the National Negro Insurance Association. They reflect the progress of these most important race institutions.

In 1921, the combined capital of companies reporting to the association was $763,982. In twenty years it has increased to $1,725,759, doubling itself with nearly $200,000 to spare.

The total annual income in 1921 was $2,525,000. In the next score of years it grew to $17,233,900.79. The total assets in 1921 were $5,000,000, and at the end of 1941, they were $26,849,788. Total business in force, 1921, $86,039,131; at the close of business 1941, $334,891,209.

Reserves at the end of 1931, the first year the reports reflected this item, amounted to $8,944,788. Ten years later they totaled $19,943,009. At this time these companies are paying back to beneficiaries and policyholders annually more than $5,500,000. The rapid growth of these great financial units attests the popularity of the efficient services being rendered.

Employment

In white companies employment may be considered as merely incidental. In Negro companies it assumes far greater importance. Negro adult policyholders are interested in employment opportunities for their children and other relatives. Rapidly they are learning that their insurance dollars invested in their own companies buy not only the same level of insurance benefits as in other companies, but help to create employment to which the talent of the race is eligible.

At the end of 1941, Negro life insurance companies were employing 921 executives and clerks in their home offices and 8,852 agents, supervisors and medical examiners on the field. The level of culture and intelligence of these field men and women is high. Many of them are college graduates. Most of them are good business agents. They understand the responsibilities of corporation services. More and more they are holding their own in competition with white agents for the business of their people. In many communities they are established citizens and leaders in the affairs of the people.

As far as can now be foreseen, the most harmful effect of the war upon the operation of Negro companies will be in depriving them of the services of some of their trained young men. Already this is being anticipated; and female units are in training for the emergency.

The clerks and executives compare favorably with those of other companies of comparable business volumes. In many of the home offices, the latest accounting and computing machines have been installed and are being efficiently used by young Negro clerical experts. The National Association has appointed a committee to sponsor the sale of war bonds and stamps through the employees of the several companies. Some of the companies have already purchased large amounts of these securities.

Progress and Trend

From all of this it will be seen that great progress has been made during the past forty years in this, one of the nation's most complicated forms of financial enterprise. But there are those among the leaders in this business who believe that more progress could have been made; that the campaign of education in the enhanced values in patronizing race companies could have been far more rapidly prosecuted if there had been a tie-up of the Negro insurance companies with the Negro press, so that the latter could have afforded to conduct a persistent publicity campaign in behalf of greater race patronage of all worthwhile Negro business.

The thinking and the trend of all life insurance companies now are more toward a cooperative basis.

More and more are state authorities insisting, and company executives accepting, the idea that company officials are merely trust officers whose functions are to collect, invest and properly disburse the funds entrusted to them by the policyholders.

The old theories of proprietary, corporate ownership by stockholders or family groups with pyramid profits as the great objectives of operation are being attacked by many modern thinkers on the national economic situation.

Philadelphia Quartermaster Depot

By Lania Davis Gavin

EACH morning thousands of workers stream into the many buildings that make up the Philadelphia Quartermaster Depot at 21st and Johnson streets. Thousands of workers, all with one idea in mind to make and assemble the great quantities and varieties of materials that Uncle Sam's Army needs to fight a war. From this great organization comes every kind of wearing apparel and equipment a soldier in any clime, or country will need.

There are parkas for the Arctic regions, tropicals for the sunny climes, the O. D. the regular soldier generally sees. And working side by side getting these materials ready are thousands of civil service workers, white and colored, working every day of the week helping to win the war.

Even with its vast capacities, the Philadelphia Quartermaster Depot comes nowhere near supplying even a quarter of what the Army needs and with the military establishment being expanded every day additional depots are being built in all sections of the country.

The Depot here, a many million dollar a day institution, occupies 90 acres of land and is still growing. There are 12,000 workers, how many colored is hard to ascertain for the law says that civil service records cannot directly separate according to race. All are citizens of the United States.

But Negroes are working everywhere in the great plant, whose commanding general is Brigadier General William A. McCain.

There was a Negro doing every kind of work except that of cutting material, and cutters must have had three years of experience in some clothing factory—an opportunity that has been denied colored for years by private industry.

They drive every conceivable kind of car and truck; direct traffic and maintain order as guards; run elevators; lecture classes of men of all nationalities learning to be inspectors; prepare and serve food; stack and check materials in and out of the huge warehouses; fly about the corridors as messengers; do repair jobs on machines; work in the photographic labs with intricate equipment.

Colored stenographers and clerks abound, and several of them operate complicated machines such as a comptometer, multigraphers, and calculating machines. A great number of colored girls and women are employed as power machine operators in the Depot's factory.

Top, Irving Nutt, left, is the principal fiscal accountant at the depot. Both he and his assistant, Clarence Munroe (center) have been there 25 years. They are conferring with Brigadier General William A. McCain, commanding general of the depot. Bottom, Miss Evelyn Johnson (center) employed in the fiscal department.

America Caught Up With Him

By George S. Schuyler

THIRTY years ago when Taft was President and a World War was "unthinkable", C. Luckeyth Roberts, a seventeen-year-old Philadelphia-born pianist, wrote a syncopated tune that baffled the arrangers of that day. He called it "Ripples of the Nile." Rag-time then held the musical stage and jazz was waiting in the wings, but the intricacies of swing were unknown except to pianists like Lonnie Hicks and "Lucky" Roberts. Today the tune that Lucky confectioned in 1912 is the current sensation on the air, on the records and in the nation's parlors and ballrooms. After thirty years America has caught up with Lucky Roberts' music.

From the night when Glenn Miller and his orchestra introduced the number over New York's Station WABC, the now "Moonlight Cocktail" has consistently been among the first ten tunes on the Hit Parade. In March it was weekly No. 9, No. 7, and No. 8; in April No. 6, No. 5 and No. 4; in May it swung between No. 4 and No. 7. Variety hailed it as "No. 1 all over the nation." The Billboard gave it leading position for several weeks. The New York Enquirer listed it as No. 1 in sheet music sales for the Eastern States and the West Coast, and No. 2 in the Middle West. To date it has sold over one million recordings by Bing Crosby and Glenn Miller.

On April 11 Glenn Miller thanked the men of the armed forces for sending in letters and cards which voted "Moonlight Cocktail" the Glenn Miller No. 1 Hit of America. On April 18, Mary Martin sang it over the radio from Hollywood to the armed forces of the nation. Horace Heidt, Tommy Tucker, Reichman and His Orchestra, Dolly Dawn and her Dawn Patrol, and several others have followed Glenn Miller and Bing Crosby in recording it.

In brief, "Moonlight Cocktail" is just about the song of wartime America.

Lucky Long Famous

Of course no one in the music world is surprised that Lucky Roberts should write a hit song. Indeed, his first international hit number was "Junkman Rag," 'way back in the dear, dead days of 1912. Next year, thanks to the efforts of Hon. Lester Walton, now United States Minister to Liberia, Roberts began his successional partnership with Alex Rogers which lasted unbrokenly until September, 1930, when Rogers passed on. During that period they were among the leading tunesmiths of the nation, with Rogers writing the lyrics and Roberts composing the music.

They wrote successful numbers for such show folk as Molly Williams, Nora Bayes, Bert Williams, Al Jolson, Sophie Tucker and Marie Cahill. Among their shows that kept America humming and patting its feet were "Baby Blues" "This and That," "Follies of the Stroll" and "Magnolia." They wrote the late John Cort's successful musical "Go! Go!" which thrived on Broadway nine months before taking to the road and was known as the fastest white show on record. Lucky did the finale of the late Florenz Zeigfeld's Follies called "Midnight Frolic Glide" which clicked on the New Amsterdam Roof for two continuous seasons, 1916-17.

"LUCKY" ROBERTS

Together they wrote all the material for the radio show "Two Black Crows," featuring Moran and Mack, which was aired every Sunday night at 9 p.m. over Station WABC for several months.

Both Rogers and Roberts worked in the sketch, with Lucky playing a piano solo each performance and Rogers playing a character in the skit.

Some of the song hits that made the name of Lucky Roberts and Alex Rogers internationally known were "Shy and Sly," "Helter Skelter" "Bon Ton," "Bon Bon Buddy," "Why Adam Sinned," "Railroad Blues," and the "Elder Eatmore Sermons," immortalized by Bert Williams.

Chief Entertainer of the 400

When you say "Lucky" to a member of America's Sixty Families, it not only conjures visions of good fortune, but the picture of a short, modest, congenial, powerfully-built colored gentleman with hands that bridge fourteen keys with ease and the nimblest fingers imaginable. For the past twenty years Lucky Roberts has been the outstanding entertainer of high society. Every winter from 1924 to 1930, he and his entertainers were in Palm Beach. He was the first Negro to be mentioned in the daily paper there except in connection with a lynching. He was the first Negro to play one hour nightly at the exclusive Everglades Club in Palm Beach, and he did it for a long time. He has met more of the people who own and rule America than any other entertainer in the country. He has received as high as $1700 for an engagement lasting from one to three hours. His orchestras have ranged from one to 45 pieces and his musicians are the highest paid in the profession. He plays more Social Register engagements than any other musical organization, white or colored. These include debutante affairs, receptions, weddings, birthday parties, and so forth. He supplied the music at the DuPont-Roosevelt nuptials.

His patrons are such social leaders as Hamilton Fish Armstrong, Vincent Astor, Clifford Brokaw, Marshall Field 3rd, Charles B. Dillingham, Nelson Doubleday, Harry Harkness Flagler, Mrs. William A. Harriman, Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, Countess Salm Von Hoogstraeten, Thomas J. Ryan Jr., Charles H. Mellon, Princess Torlonia, Frank Vanderlip, Rodman Wanamaker, and over a thousand others listed in society's Blue Book. He has played in every exclusive club in America. The DuPonts, Drexel Biddles, Medill McCormicks and Goellets know him as the affable, gentlemanly, discrete little man he is.

During 1927 he regularly selected and sent the latest phonograph records to the Prince of Wales (now the Duke of Windsor) at his request. When the Duke visited America, Lucky entertained him for nine successive nights at the Mackays, the Vanderbilts, the Fleich-mans and others. Letters from the Duke testify to the esteem in which he holds Lucky.

Teaches the Aristocracy

Not only does Lucky Roberts entertain the 400, but he teaches them. Back in April, 1926, when he taught the elite at Palm Beach the intricacies of the Charleston, New York's Daily News featured him in a page spread. He has taught Mrs. Doris Duke Cromwell piano for five years. Other social register pupils have been Mrs. Dorothy Clark Norman, Alfred Vanderbilt, Mrs. McCullough, Miss Nancy and Mr. Maurice Hecksher, Mrs. Young Kaufman and Mrs. Garbisch. An early pupil was the late George Gershwin whose "Porgy and Bess," starring Anne Brown and Todd Duncan, is a current long-run Broadway musical hit. Other outstanding pupils have been Duke Ellington, J. P. Johnson, Earl Hines and Don Redmon. Lucky himself studied theory, counterpoint, fugue and composition under Eloise Smith and Dr. Melville Charlton.

Born in Philadelphia, Pa., August 7, 1893, the son of Wm. L. and Elizabeth Roberts, Lucky was practically reared in the theater. At five years of age he had learned to sing, dance and play the piano, and was engaged by Gus Sulky for theaters. One night his father saw him perform for the first time at Philadelphia's Bijou Theater dressed only in a raffia skirt. Enraged, Roberts Sr. stopped the show. The packed house roared, thinking the scene was part of the act.

Later, relenting, his father took him to hear Lonnie Hicks, the leading pianist of the day, and the youngster was entranced. Mr. Hicks advised him to keep up his playing and study hard. Lucky gives Lonnie Hicks credit for starting him on his career of music and helping him often in the early days.

Next season young Roberts joined the Mamie Remington company as a "pickaninny". He went to Europe three times with her and Gus Sulky. The latter paid him $1.25 weekly plus maintenance and tutoring, and sent his father five dollars weekly for five years.

On December 28, 1911, Lucky married Miss Lena Sanford of New York City when both were in their teens and traveling with the late J. Leubrie Hill in his "My Friend from Dixie" company. Mrs. Roberts has appeared on many of his programs as soloist. She boasts that she remembers every piece he has written.

To Carnegie Hall

On August 30, 1939, Lucky Roberts held his first concert at Carnegie Hall, receiving excellent reviews from the critics. Among his patrons was Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. A second concert was held at Town Hall, May 28, 1941.

The Town Hall concert almost failed to come off, for on July 1, 1940, Lucky met with a terrible automobile accident. His jaw, his right hand and both feet were broken. It was widely believed that he would never play or walk again, and there was gloom among the aristocracy, the musical folk and the hoi polloi. For weeks he was confined to Harlem hospital, attended by the finest colored and white specialists. Thanks to good health (he has always abstained from liquor and tobacco, preferring ice cream and fresh milk), he was back on his feet in ten weeks. Today the little giant of swing is as spry and genial as ever, spreading joy among rich and poor with his fascinating rhythm.

INVEST IN VICTORY!

Our boys can take the War to the enemy, if we back them up with ships and tanks and guns! But that takes money!

Help your Government to put the tools of war into the hands of our soldiers by purchasing War Savings Bonds and Stamps. And remember... just one Bond can't lick the Axis any more than just one gun! It takes millions of Americans buying War Savings Bonds and Stamps every pay day!

Bonds cost $18.75 and up... and they pay you back one-third more in only 10 years! Stamps cost 10¢, 25¢, and up... soon total the price of a Bond if bought regularly.

Help our boys on the fighting fronts wherever they may be! Buy War Savings Bonds as an investment for yourself and your country.

Along the N.A.A.C.P. Battlefront

Washington Bureau: By the time this magazine reaches readers, the new Washington bureau of the N.A.A.C.P. will be in full operation at 100 Massachusetts avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Director of the bureau's activities will be Walter White, executive secretary of the Association, who will have as his administrative assistant Frank D. Reeves, who for the past year and a half has been legal assistant in the national office in New York.

The Washington bureau was established because of the growing importance of federal action and federal legislation on problems affecting Negro citizens. The bureau will not be a substitute for the national office in New York, which will continue to be the headquarters of the Association from which all activity will be directed. However, the bureau will handle all matters involving federal agencies, federal legislation and regulation, and will act as a lobby headquarters. Mr. White will spend approximately half of his time in the Washington office, and half in the New York office.

Churchill Letter: In reply to a letter sent September 26, 1941, by the N.A.A.C.P. to Prime Minister Winston Churchill on five types of racial discrimination by British agencies in this country, the Prime Minister's office wrote on March 27 a reply, received in New York in mid-April. Highlights of the letter:

(1) The British government has dropped the requirement that pilots to ferry bombers from America to England "must be of the white race."

(2) Refusal by the British government of the services of Negro physicians in the United States for work among the people of England implied "no reflection on the professional competence" of those doctors, but was done because the population, and especially children, "would be uneasy" with physicians of a different color.

Texas Primary Case: On May 11, Judge T. M. Kennerly, of the U. S. district court for the southern district of Texas, handed down a decision against those who were suing to outlaw in Texas the famous white primary system, which keeps Negroes from the ballot box.

This decision, which was not unexpected in the lower court, will be appealed to the next highest federal court by the plaintiffs through their lawyers, W. J. Durham, and Thurgood Marshall, N.A.A.C.P. special counsel.

* Leading figures in the Democratic party in Texas, including E. B. Germany, chairman of the State executive committee; and C. A. Butcher, secretary, testified that the essential requirement and practically the only one for voting in the Democratic primary in the state was that the person be white. N.A.A.C.P. lawyers relied on the U. S. supreme court opinion in U. S. vs. Classic, a case arising in New Orleans, in which the supreme court held that a primary was part of a general election. Since Negroes cannot be barred from general elections, the N.A.A.C.P. felt that the weight of this precedent would swing the Texas case in favor of the Negro plaintiffs.

However, Judge Kennerly, in his conclusions of law, held that the primary case in Texas was different from U. S. vs. Classic. He maintained, also, that nomination in the Democratic primary in Texas does not mean elections to office. Judge Kennerly reached this conclusion in spite of the statement in the record, which said: "Since 1859, all Democratic nominees for Congress, Senate and governor have been elected in Texas, with two exceptions."

Thurgood Marshall emphasized that this case affects not only the 900,000 Negro residents of Texas, but many other millions throughout the South, since the white primary system is one of the principal methods used (but by no means the only one) to disfranchise Negroes in the South.

Police Brutality: A citizens' committee, composed of representatives of 125 organizations in Baltimore, Md., organized by the Baltimore N.A.A.C.P., of which Mrs. Lillie M. About 2,000 persons made up the pilgrimage, which traveled in chartered buses and private cars. Baltimore citizens were seething because of the killing of Private Thomas Broadus by Edward Bender, a city policeman, on January 31, and the refusal of the Grand Jury to indict Bender.

South Carolina Voting: The Richland county Democratic convention on May 4 voted down a resolution which would have permitted otherwise qualified Negroes to vote in the Democratic primary. The resolution was sponsored by five white Democratic leaders who said they felt that many Negroes are now "qualified in mind and character to take part in our form of government." The sponsors declared that the state was going to have to relent sooner or later, and one speaker in favor of the move said, "It is coming in one form or another."

The present stumbling block to Negroes voting in the Democratic primary in South Carolina is the rule that they must have voted the Democratic ticket continuously for 66 years.

Omaha Teachers: Persistent work by the Omaha, Neb., branch of the N.A.A.C.P. has secured the appointment of a Negro teacher in the public schools, the first such in 30 years. Co-operating in the effort was the Community Clearing Council, representing 35 Negro organizations.

A welcome address will be given by Thomas L. Griffith, president of the branch. The opening program will feature a keynote address on the work of the N.A.A.C.P.

Masons Issue Statement On Negroes and War

The United Supreme Council of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry (Prince Hall Affiliation), at its 61st Annual Session in Philadelphia, May 12th, heard reports of an increase of 547 in the membership of the Northern Jurisdiction. The following statement was issued after a panel discussion on "The Prince Hall Mason and the War,":

ATTITUDES

The Negroes of the United States have a great stake in the outcome of this struggle. They are vitally concerned that there shall remain in the world not only four freedoms but all freedoms.

Even though they have at present only a grudgingly small share in these freedoms, they must see to it that there shall hereafter be an opportunity to fight for a larger share. If the Axis wins there will be no such opportunity.

Meanwhile we must not lie. It is a lie to pretend that we are happy about receiving the same sort of treatment from which we are asked to help spare the anti-Axis world.

On every proper occasion we should say this without fear and without deceit.

We should criticize whenever and wherever necessary, always taking care to do so in a manner not to hinder the fighting spirit of our country. Searching out the weak places in our armor is a sure way to strengthen our power to resist.

DEEDS

Encourage Negroes, especially the youth, to stand up to their full height, and not to cower either to the Hitlers within or the Hitlers without.

Give every possible aid to the country's war effort. It is also our country—the only country we have.

Encourage Negroes everywhere to save a part of their earnings and to invest in war bonds every penny they can spare.

Help in every way to place Negroes in gainful employment. Especially help members of your own Consistories and their families in this regard.

Join heartily in the war activities of your own community.

Organize a war council in your Consistory to carry out this program and also to seek out other ways of improving the condition of the Race.

Do not countenance disloyalty or give any manner of comfort either to the misguided defeatists or subversive enemies in our country.

REGIME OF CASTE

DEEP SOUTH (A Social Anthropological Study of Caste and Class). Written by Allison Davis, Burleigh B. Gardner, and Mary R. Gardner. Directed by W. Lloyd Warner. Chicago: The University of Chicago Press, 1941. XV+558pp. $4.50.

In this book four anthropologists—one a Negro and his wife; the other a white man and his wife—apply the techniques of their discipline, not to a study of such remote peoples as the Trobriand Islanders or the Tolowa-Tututni as anthropologists are wont to do, but to a detailed, objective analysis of their own people in an area of our own culture. The community they selected was in an area of the South commonly called the "deep South," and they write of this town pseudonymously as "Old City." "Old City is a small city of over 10,000 people, of which number over half are Negroes. It is a trade center for the large plantations of the cotton countries which surround it. These rural areas are about 80 per cent Negro." Part I begins with a "Social Anthropological Study of Caste and Class," written by W. Lloyd Warner; to be followed in Chapter II by an analysis of "The System of Color Castes," by the authors, as it operates in Old City. The rest of this section is devoted to a study of the class and caste lines as they operate among both whites and Negroes in the community.

Though the caste nature of southern society is questioned by a few sociologists, notably Mr. Charles S. Johnson, because it lacks some of the classic examples of caste as found in India, there can hardly be any denying of the fact, as our authors clearly prove, that the basal relations of whites and blacks in Old City is one of caste. The whites constitute the superordinate caste; the Negroes, the chandala. The manner in which the system operates is, of course, well known to all Negroes, and to most southern whites; though whites are perhaps not as conscious of all its niceties as are the Negroes. "A caste organization . . . must be further defined as one where marriage between the two groups is not sanctioned and where there is no opportunity for members of the lower group to rise into the upper group or for members of the upper group to fall into the lower one." In other words, the "practice of endogamy" is the keystone of caste. The mere fact that not all Negroes accept their status or that there is frequent white violence against Negroes to remind the latter to stay in their place does not alter the caste-like nature of white-black relations. The usual symbols and rituals of white superordination and black subordination are used: derogation of blackness, spatial separation, deferential behaviour of Negroes in presence of whites, belief in the childlike nature of Negroes, and so on. Furthermore, taboos have been created to punish all negligence and failure in Negro observance of these rituals. Few, whites even, can violate them with impunity.

Certain Negroes may be superior to certain whites in their class relations, and the whites will recognize this superiority; but in their caste relations all Negroes are inferior to all whites. "One of the most important factors in modifying caste behavior is the class structure of both the Negro and the white castes." These modifications are found largely in the areas of certain economic relations and they will be mentioned when we discuss the relations of caste to economics.

Both the white and the Negro castes are further subdivided by classes and cliques. Within the white caste there are three main classes: the upper, the middle, and the lower; and social mobility within these classes is considerable. Among the Negroes class divisions roughly parallel those found among the whites, but with less differentiation because of caste and restricted economic opportunities. Position in the Negro upper-class is more likely to depend upon approximation to the white physical type, acculturation to "white norms," and education than upon economic status.

How these caste and class divisions operate in the plantation economy, in cotton culture, in areas of business, in local government and politics is analyzed in Part II. Landownership is largely in the hands of whites, though there are a few Negro plantation owners and a few Negroes who own their individual farms. This white dominance of landownership is reinforced through the caste system. Most Negroes, therefore are tenants; but then there are white tenants too. Plantation owners, however, because of class antagonism against white tenants and because Negroes are more easily subordinated, prefer Negro tenants; which means a considerable modification of certain of the caste controls. There is further modification of the caste rituals where a Negro might employ white labor; where a Negro has considerable wealth; and where there are non-local manufacturing concerns in the community. In storekeeping, contracting, farming, and professional service to Negroes there may be further disruptions of caste. In the local government, politics, and the courts the usual caste controls are operative though there may be modifications of them under special circumstances.

This study, as must any realistic study of the southern social structure, makes clear the dichotomy between democratic principles and democratic action. The taboos may seem ridiculous, and to a realistic outsider they are; and many of the caste controls seem to have reached a pinnacle of fatuity; but then this is Old City; this is the culture matrix of its society; and only such objectively scientific studies as this can help us to understand the life of the Deep South and such communities as this with a possible eye to ameliorative measures in the future. Deep South is stimulating in its ideas and worth careful study by every student of race and culture who is concerned with the problem of Negro-white relations in the United States.

WORKING FOR UNCLE SAM

The Negro Federal Government Worker (A Study of his Classification Status in the District of Columbia, 1883-1938.) By Laurence J. W. Hayes, M. A. The Howard University Studies in the Social Sciences, Vol. III, No. 1. Washington: The Graduate School, Howard University, 1941. 18+155pp. $1.50.

The aim of this study is "to analyze the classifications and salaries of the Negro Federal personnel of more than sixty bureaus, departments, and independent establishments from 1883 through 1938; it contrasts these classifications with those held by white Federal Government workers; and it discusses the rules and regulations of the United States Civil Service Commission which most materially affect the present classification status of the Negro Federal employee." Since the signing of the Civil Service Act by President Chester A. Arthur in 1883, the number of Negro employees on the payroll of the Federal government has risen from 620 in 1881 to 82,000 in 1938. In 1881 the per cent of Negro employees was .57. In 1938 it was 9.85. This represents both an absolute and a relative increase in the number of Negro Federal workers. In the District of Columbia in 1938, the Executive Branch of the Federal Government employed 115,552 people, of which total 8.41 per cent or 9,717 were Negroes. The department with the highest percentage of Negro employees is the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works with 49.4 or 29.67 per cent of its total number of 1,665 employees Negro. On the other hand, the Department of the Interior has the largest aggregate number of Negro employees, 3,086, but a relative rank among the departments of four.

Yet ninety per cent of these Negro Federal workers in the District are "custodial workers." "The custodial services include all classes of positions, the duties of which are to supervise or to perform manual work involved in the custody, maintenance, and protection of public buildings, premises, and equipment, the transportation of public officers, employees, or property, and the transmission of official papers." The salaries in the custodial services range from $600 to $3,200, yet "it can be asserted without fear of successful contradiction that no Negro has ever received $3,200

For Those Who March

(In memory of the Life of the late James Weldon Johnson)

We have passed the landmarks of Yesterday
Where chained to oppression we bore the load
Of a nation's dark disgrace.
More swiftly now in step with the great
Up guarded hills where strong men wait
To welcome a valiant race.

No backward thrust may impale a sound:
It moves where mighty forces surround
The earth, the seas and the skies.
Set a new tone for the phrase of your feet
Let dull drums fade and chants retreat
Where the valleys fail to rise.

We have a noble command of power
And we firmly scepter our strength each hour
Of this ascending day.
Boast of your blood and your lineal gifts:
Of the Sovereign spirit that fires and lifts
You above the swamp-mired way.

We have passed the landmarks of Yesterday
Where dead minds mock and flat tongues goad:
We are fiercely free!
Claim the heights where strong guards arch
A path of honor for those who march Unbowed to victory.

—ELSIE TAYLOR DU'TRIEUILLE

"Picture of the year" is what The Call of Kansas City, Missouri, labeled this photograph of J. H. Kindelberger, president of North American Aviation Corporation, inspecting the work of Negro skilled men in the new bomber plant in the Kansas City area. In March, 1941, Mr. Kindelberger made a statement that Negroes would be employed only as janitors. He changed his mind and a year later seems pleased with his Negro skilled workmen as a salary in the Custodial Service." In June 1938 there were employed in the Executive Branch of the White House, ten Negroes: one was a secretarial clerk, one a senior clerk, three messengers, and five minor custodial workers. Though the "Constitutional discretion of the President over many personnel matters is broad," our "Four-Freedoms" President has not seen fit to employ any more Negroes in the higher classifications. Even under the New Deal which is supposed to be especially liberal toward Negroes the number of Negro Federal employees' increased through 1933-1938 only .06 per cent.

This custodial pattern of Negro Federal employment was, of course, not originated by the New Deal. President Wilson's Administration probably did more than any other to fix the current pattern. It was under Wilson that the now outlawed photograph was required of all civil service applicants. Fingerprints are now required, but the "current practice of certifying the names of three eligibles" from whom a selection is to be made is still used to eliminate Negroes. What is worse is that the jim-crow pattern set by the Federal Government is widely copied by private industry. When President Roosevelt complained about the discrimination against Negroes, in Federal Government itself.

Our author has unearthed several historical oddities in respect to Negro Federal employment. They cannot exactly be called discoveries because they were known to a few people before, yet they are interesting. The first one is that the assistant Librarian of Congress in 1901 was a Negro, Daniel Murray. Another is that the first Negro Federal clerk was Solomon James Johnson, formerly Abraham Lincoln's barber. Johnson received his appointment as a result not of favoritism, but by successfully passing "a departmental promotional examination." Blanche Kelso Bruce was once offered the position of assistant Postmaster General, which post he refused. And the last one, believe it or not, is that Emmett J. Scott as a Special-assistant to the Secretary of War received the munificent salary of $1,200. One other fact that must not be overlooked: in 1908 there were 11 Negroes in the diplomatic and consular services. In 1938 there were only three.

Mr. Hayes offers a number of recommendations for improvement of the conditions which he describes. All of them are excellent, but they will probably be more or less ineffective until the Negro begins to make a more intelligent use of his political power. The book is well written and illuminating.

Solid Achievement Reflected In the Continued Progress of North Carolina Mutual

President C. C. Spaulding, of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, Durham, North Carolina, has reported another year of solid achievement in which the company continued to go forward in service to the insuring public.

During 1941, the company registered total income in the sum of $3,341,796.83, with total admitted assets of $7,222,192.94—the two principal items in the evaluation of any financial institution. The total admitted assets are over $1,000,000 in excess of the maximum amount of statutory reserve maintained for the protection of policyholders.

North Carolina Mutual, organized in 1898, had $57,730,690 in insurance in force at the end of 1941. Over 169,000 new policyholders were added in 1941, and President Spaulding points to this as an indication of a continued broadening of public interest in life insurance and an appreciation of the service North Carolina Mutual is prepared to render. The company offers a full and complete assortment of life insurance coverage on the old line legal reserve basis.

President's Comments

In commenting on the Company's progress during 1941, President Spaulding said: "Notwithstanding the year 1941 was one of the most critical in the world's history, the company finds itself in infinitely better position to serve its 356,994 policyholders and the public generally than ever before. Thus, over six per cent of the Negro population in the territory in which the company operates carry North Carolina Mutual policies, thereby directly or indirectly safeguarding the financial interest of from 20 to 25 per cent of this group."

Excerpts from other comments by the president in connection with the 43d statement of assets and liabilities: "The most important element in any business transaction is the degree of safety it offers. The management of North Carolina Mutual always has remembered this fact in shaping the investment program holders is reflected in the payment of $1,017,998.98 to policyholders and beneficiaries during the year 1941, bringing the total since organization to the sum of $20,464,494.69.

"In addition to these payments, North Carolina Mutual has loaned more money to Negroes on their homes and other real estate than has any other private institution in America. The directors of the company always have recognized that since practically all of the company's premium income is received from Negroes, there is no valid reason why an equitable portion of the reserve fund created by the premiums received, should not be invested in amply secured first mortgages on the homes and other real estate owned by Negroes, and especially those who are policyholders of the company. This constitutes the extra service which an insurance company is expected to render in the communities in which it operates."

In every respect, the ability of North Carolina Mutual to serve its thousands of policyholders has constantly improved. The future holds every promise that the service the company is now rendering will broaden in scope and enhance in value with succeeding years.
